

8 Careers That Use AP[®] Human Geography

Oh, the possibilities...

Human Geographers for Non-Profits

Help understand needs stemming from issues related to population, medicine, food security, and the environment.

Human Resource Personnel

Manage talent for companies.

Supply Chain Managers

Train people in economies of scale, resource efficiency, and globalization.

Educators

Teach human geography at the secondary or collegiate level.

Geographical Information Systems Operators

Develop and interpret information from GPS systems, satellite data, and programming remote sensing satellites.

Government Property Assessment and Real Estate Agents

Evaluate markets and zoning to value government property or private real estate.

City Planners

Determine the best areas for city growth using spatial data and assist with the management of urban sprawl and city renewal programs.

Lawyers

Use skills acquired in human geography classes, such as evidence evaluation, immigration knowledge, and knowledge of how governments operate.